

WORLD SETUP / CHARACTER BIO / STORY

Two ring leaders of a dark traveling circus; Cirqque de Fripoullie have a baby known as Kasdeia Ravada, this is who the story will be focussing on and how her moral troubles contradicted that of the circus leaving her to fend for herself. As a child Kasdeia loved venturing off into the area where the circus would lay settlement during her travels she would come across small beasts both demons and creatures and befriending these. Due to her friendly ways with the animals she always took pleasure in bringing these back to her parents and being told she could keep them as pets at the time Kasdeia was unaware of the sinister plans her parents had in store. Her parents let this continue for numerous years as animals got larger and more fascinating when Kasdeia reached the age of thirteen her parents unveiled their cruel plans. Kasdeia was reluctant knowing how she would have to harm the animals she believed to have been her only friends and pets for many years but was punished herself if she didn't follow the orders of her parents. Eventually she gave way conditioning the animals into performing wild acts using their powers. Those animals that were unwilling to perform or not fit to where forced to run back of the circus powering the electricity and scaring trespassers away. Smaller creatures would be held within a petting area for kids to treat however they pleased. As for the larger, dangerous looking beings these where put through harsh trials within the ring commanded by Kasdeia. Now knowing what her parents plans for the animals where Kasdeia stopped going out into the wild to befriend the wildlife. Creatures started to dwindle within fripoullie, the audience noticed this across the land and began to stop attending the circus this left Kasdeia's parents to force her into collecting more beasts. They gave her the base equipment for fending by herself and sent her out for weeks at a time if she was to not return a bounty would be set on her head there was no reward for her return. However, a deal was made that any who capture Kasdeia could do as they please with her as long as she was returned alive. Learning to not try and escape Kasdeia began lying to her parents saying that no creatures would befriend her and that less where showing themselves.

Having less and less attractions at the circus the two ring leaders began to sell off Kasdeia for money what little animals where left lived in too poor conditions to perform yet alone be viewed. Eventually this all got too much for Kasdeia again she tried countless attempts to run away and escape but to no avail. Within the following years Kasdeia spent her nights secretly planning an escape plan. This involved setting fake bounties on creatures at a set location, one she had learned well as a child. From here she would gather the basics such as weaponry and food. Everything was in place her last objective was to convince her parents about the creatures and say how she could bring more money back to the circus as she had learned her lessons. Although this took some time in convincing them they finally agreed warning that if she was lying they would set a larger bounty on her head and never welcome her back home. The night of her plan came by, relaying plans over in her head as she felt the cobbles under the wheels although it was only a short distance to Terre des Betes it felt like an eternity finally the carts came to a halt. Outside she could hear sounds of the circus being set up amongst it all was the whining on beasts still pushing their way through life. Hearing the whines gave Kasdeia one more idea, she had to rescue them in hope to restore how they used to be. Kasdeia was aware how this might interfere with the plans she had set out for the night but knew it was the right thing to do. Within an hour, the circus fell silent and the cart in which Kasdeia was staying unlocked her parents dragged her out and gave her the final warning showing her the bounty they had already written out. She began to set off and waited around in the trees for her parents to leave for the nearby city as they did every time they set up a new show. Once they had left she began her new plan to rescue the animals still being withheld under the ring leaders. It was a difficult task with the animals being reluctant to join Kasdeia after the harm she had caused for all the years. Eventually all the remaining beasts joined. Due to exploring the area as a child she was aware of an old temple known for its healing properties, hidden away in a heavily wooded area. As a group, they all made their way to the temple lunaire, thankfully for both Kasdeia and her accompanying friends no harm came their way during the travel. Before setting up camp that night Kasdeia wanted to heal the beings she had saved. One by one she lifted them on to the glowing alter where the two moons hit and witnessed how each creature restored with the most magnificent of them being an electric sabretooth who she had only known as a cub. Suddenly the two moons began to shift altering the light to hit Kasdeia, as this happened two large faun like ears grew from the side of her face while glowing rune like tattoos formed across her hands. Although unaware of what was happening Kasdeia wasn't scared she knew it wasn't a bad force being granted upon her. Surrounding her she could here various voices speaking all of different calibre.

Finally, one voice stood out from the rest, that of the electric sabretooth. "I am AhPewhep, your kindness to all beings both demon and not has been received greatly in restoring us due to this I have given you the powers to hear all creatures and summon them if ever needed first though you must befriend those you wish to summon as you have with us"

After receiving the powers bestowed upon her kasdeia swore revenge on any circus harbouring animals for entertainment starting with her parents. Not wanting to rush into this she spent the next five years carrying out bounties across the land avoiding any who recognised her. Throughout this journey she then gained new armour, powers and friends all helping her to defeat fripoullie and others alike.
